Unlimited Bandwidth Web Hosting - 7 Other Factors That You Must Consider in Selecting Your Web Host

Numerous top web hosting companies are fighting for your business and are right now offering unlimited bandwidth web hosting inside their hosting plans. However, the seemingly "unlimited bandwidth" feature is actually just a marketing tactic as some clients have noticed that their service were interrupted after a certain amount of bandwidth was used up. Eventhough we must not prejudice a company's credibility because of such marketing gimmick, you need to also think about the 7 points presented below to save you headaches down the road.

1. Reliability/Server Uptime: The first and most crucial factor in deciding on your web hosting company will be the reliability of the company and the server uptime. For any site to be found on the online world, the server on which the files of the website are hosted need to be continually be in service. If the server is down most of the time, no one is going to see your website on the web. As such, you should select a reputable web host which is able to give you server uptime of more than 99.8 percent.

2. Unlimited Domains: After you have set up your first website and realized exactly how simple it is actually to do that, you will certainly wish to put together more websites. Ensure that the unlimited bandwidth web hosting package that you're signing up also enables you to add unlimited domains to your account. Quite a few top web hosting companies are offering this in their hosting packages.

3. Disk Space/Memory: The amount of disk space included in the hosting package is of great importance if you intends to build a large website or you are going to put together many websites in the near future. Go for a company that gives you high disk space if not unlimited disk space.

4. Price: The price of the web hosting package need to meet your hosting needs and expense plan. The price of hosting plans decreases as you increase the numbers of years of contract. If you're new to creating websites, it's advisable that you choose a twelve month contract on a basic hosting plan. As your hosting needs grow in the future, you can upgrade your hosting package and choose longer contract periods.

5. Control Panel: It is essential that the company gives you a good control panel for you to manage your hosting account and to maintain it. It is recommended that you get cPanel as your control panel because it's well designed, easy to use and comes with many different tools.

6. Instructional Videos: If you're just starting out in creating websites, you'd want the company to give you some instructional videos on the several common tasks in getting your websites up and running. You can get extremely annoyed if you don't have clear guidelines on setting up your first FTP account or creating an add-on domain.

7. Customer Support: The final but very critical aspect that you need to think about is customer support. A good company would be able to provide you telephone or live-chat support 24/7. Ensure that the customer service from your web hosting company is highly rated.

If you have selected an unlimited bandwidth web host with due considerations given to the above factors, you will undoubtedly have the peace of mind hosting your websites.
